PROPOSED CATALOG DESCRIPTION (no longer than 75 words):

Historic preservation is the practice of protecting and preserving historic places. It strengthens local economies, fosters civic beauty, and enhances the appreciation of local and national history. But who decides what should be preserved? This course provides an introduction to the field, examining its history and practice in the United States. Students will gain an essential set of tools for critically observing historic sites, interpreting their historic context, evaluating their significance, and developing preservation plans.

RATIONALE FOR NEW COURSE:

This course is part of our new Public History Minor. It is an upper level course that provides an introduction to one of the many Public History practices – this one deals with Historical Preservation. We are putting it at the 400 level because even though it is an introduction, we want it to be mostly for History majors and public history minors, though not exclusively; we want to be able to move at a pretty fast clip; and the students will carry out a demanding research project that students at the 300 level would have more difficulty with. We made HIST 300 (introduction to Public History) a recommended course prep to indicate that the course will assume some prior knowledge of public history, but we don’t want to make it a hard pre-req b/c that would exclude students willing and able to catch up. Same with HIST 201 (introduction to the study of History), a course only HIST majors take. Students don’t NEED to have it, but it does indicate to those taking it who are not majors that they will have some catching up to do. This is true of all our 400 courses.

Course Overview and Objectives:

This course will provide an introduction to the field of historic preservation, examining the history of historic preservation in the United States, the development of preservation administrative systems, the preservation planning process, and preservation research methods and strategies. The course has a special emphasis on the interpretation of vernacular architecture and cultural landscapes. Students will learn how to critically observe historic places, interpret their cultural and historic context, evaluate their significance, and develop preservation goals and plans to determine what should be preserved and how.

Course Requirements:

Readings: Your first responsibility is to do the reading and discuss your reactions in class. On most weeks, you will be required to read several articles or chapters related to the week’s major topic. Usually, this will be from 75 to 100 pages of reading per week. The required books for the course are:

All other readings for this course will be available on Blackboard. Bring a paper or electronic copy, marked with your notes and questions, to class.

Historic Places Paper: Write an eight- to ten-page paper that explores a specific historic site, providing an analysis of site’s preservation over time. This could be a private property or a public site; it might be a room, a building, or a complex landscape. You will also draw on the introductory readings to define preservation in your paper.

Mid-Term Examination: There will be a mid-term exam on [DATE] during the regularly scheduled class time. It will concentrate on the assigned readings and class discussions.
Preservation Essay: Write a twelve- to fifteen-page essay that addressing these questions:

- What are the two or three major issues in preservation about which there appears to be the most consensus? Define the issues, why they are important, and the discussion supporting them, citing sources.
- What emerging issues/content/approaches do you think will have the greatest influence on the future of preservation over the next twenty years?
- What aspects of preservation are you most interested in pursuing in your professional career?

Final Examination: There will be a final exam on [DATE]. It will cover the assigned readings and class discussions since the mid-term.

Assignments receive grades on the following scale: A=90-100, B=80-89, C=70-79, D=60-69, and F=59 and below. Individual assignments may receive pluses or minuses; the overall final grade will not. There will be no incompletes given in this class. You must complete all assignments and exams to receive credit for this class.

Class Policies:

Academic Integrity: Please be advised that the penalty for academic dishonesty – including plagiarism and other forms of cheating – in any UMBC History Department course is an "F" for the course. ALL cases of academic dishonesty will be reported to the Academic Conduct Committee. For further definitions on what academic misconduct is and how to avoid it at all costs please see http://library.acadiau.ca/tutorials/plagiarism/.

Attendance: More than one unexcused absence from a scheduled class will have a significant adverse affect on your participation grade.

Due Dates and Deadlines: Papers and projects are due at the beginning of class on the assigned dates. Any late submissions will be penalized a grade level for each day they are overdue. For example, a C+ paper turned in one day late would receive a grade of C; two days late, a C-; three days late, a D+, etc.

Electronics Policy: Use of electronic devices for non-class related activities is not permitted in this class. If you ignore this policy I will mark your class participation for the day as a zero.

UMBC Statement on Disabilities and Information for Obtaining Accommodations:

UMBC is committed to eliminating discriminatory obstacles that disadvantage students based on disability. Student Support Services (SSS) is the UMBC department designated to receive and maintain confidential files of disability-related documentation, certify eligibility for services, determine reasonable accommodations, develop with each student plans for the provision of such accommodations, and serve as a liaison between faculty members and students regarding disability-related issues.

If you require certain accommodations, please submit an application (found at http://sss.umbc.edu/files/2014/05/RequestForServicesForm-Updated-2.docx and all disability documentation to Student Support Services (Math/Psych Bldg, Room 213, UMBC, 1000 Hilltop Circle, Baltimore, MD 21250) as soon as possible. Please see the application for details on appropriate documentation guidelines. For information or questions about the application, please call 410-455-2459.
Once your accommodations have been approved, you will meet with the UMBC- Shady Grove Program Coordinator, Ms. Ashley Waters (awaters@umbc.edu), who will work with you and your instructors to ensure you receive the proper accommodations. If you have any questions or concerns, please notify Ms. Waters immediately. For students at the Shady Grove campus, the Center for Academic Success (CAS) provides additional support. CAS provides test proctoring services and can act as a liaison between students at USG and their home campus, as well as between students and their professors. For more information on the services CAS provides, please visit http://www.shadygrove.umd.edu/campus-services/cas/dss.
