CURRENT CATALOG DESCRIPTION:

A philosophical examination of a concept playing a significant role in the history of ideas or contemporary culture. Recent topics included the philosophy of work, morality and the media, and creationism and evolution. This course is repeatable for credit.

PROPOSED CATALOG DESCRIPTION (no longer than 75 words): leave blank if no changes are being proposed to the catalog description. NOTE: information about prerequisites should NOT appear in the catalog description.)

An examination of a central topic, movement or figure in either the history of philosophy or contemporary philosophy. This course is repeatable for credit with different topics up to four times, totaling no more than 12 credits.

RATIONALE FOR CHANGE:

The proposed description is more accurate and appropriate for how the course is used. Since topics are included elsewhere in the catalog description, they are not needed in the course description. It also clarifies that the course is repeatable for credit four times, but only with different topics. The alteration in wording of prerequisite is for uniformity across all 300 level courses.
