RATIONALE FOR CHANGE:

Course Number Change: The proposed change in prerequisite (DANC 310 and DANC 330) warrants a change in course number. Both the new prerequisites and the course number communicate the intended rigor of the course. See Prerequisites and Corequisites below.

Formal Title Change: Years ago DANC 290 was a lower level independent study course requiring minimal meetings with a faculty mentor. Over the years, the format has shifted to be part classroom lecture and discussion, and part independent work. Students meet as a class to learn about, to discuss, and to critique their work in progress. Students do their choreographic work independently in their own scheduled rehearsals.

Prerequisites and Corequisites: The dance faculty find that the current prerequisite (DANC 230 Improvisation) is not sufficiently rigorous for students who are engaging in the process of choreographing an independent work. Without a first course in dance composition, students do not yet have the choreographic tools to be able to create work that shows some sophistication in both concept and process. Some students decide to wait until they have completed DANC 330 Dance Composition I before they take DANC 290, and we have observed that these students create better work than those who enter the course with only the current prerequisite. Listing DANC 230 and DANC 310 Intermediate Contemporary Dance Techniques I as prerequisites seems unnecessary because DANC 230 and 310 already are required for DANC 330. We list it here, too, because transfer students sometimes enter UMBC with a Dance Composition course on their transcript, but may not have taken an Improvisation course, nor risen to the Intermediate level of Contemporary Dance Technique.

The new course number, DANC 335, reflects the increased rigor that can be required when all students enter the course with a higher level of skill and a strong background in both physical practice and creative practice. We are committed to raising expectations regarding the level of work in DANC 335 in order to better prepare students for the even more rigorous choreography component of the capstone course, DANC 475 Senior Projects.

Repeatability: This course is repeatable so that students can have the opportunity to choose to hone their craft further, and would benefit from increased work and exploration. A repeat of this course would result in deeper work, especially for those students who might need additional experience in choreography.
